environment was not made.

Finally, while being treated by Dr. Rea, a noted, environmental physician, Dr. Nagy discovered the cause of her sickness was toxic mold in her home. She moved to an island, threw away her moldy possessions, and got well.

Now healthy, Dr. Nagy is dedicated to bringing what she has learned to the public, to medical students, to doctors, legislators and health policymakers, and is a toxic exposure expert.

An interview with Dr. Nagy is featured in the Netflix series Afflicted, Episode 6: "Treatment for Toxic Mold and Chemical and Electrical Sensitivity"

PODCAST

"Doctor Toxin" w/Dr. Nagy

About the Environmental Health Alliance

The Environmental Health Alliance (EHA) is a 501c3 nonprofit focused on educating the public and doctors about the increasing frequency of mild to severe environmental illness in this country. The Alliance participated in the CDC's National Conversation on Public Health and Chemical Exposures as well as the NIH Health in Buildings Roundtable, Massachusetts Medical Society.

You can donate to the