MICRO WAVE NEWS

A Report on Non-Ionizing Radiation

Other Electromagnetic Weapons

August 14, 2006

Scientists from New Zealand, the U.K. and Finland are worried about a different kind of electromagnetic weapon: One that could wreck havoc with the world's communications systems —think HAARP run by a Herman Kahn wannabe. Check out the press release issued today by the University of Otago. For background, see "Nuclear Explosions in Orbit," a feature article originally published in Scientific American.

microwave weapons, HAARP, Scientific American, © Copyright Microwave News 2003-2026. All Rights Reserved.