Brief Comment

I cannot talk on a cell phone without feeling ill for hours. I value my land line and would be lost without it. I have lost a friend to a brain tumor (a lawyer who started using cell phones very early) and both of my children have friends with brain tumors. I was diagnosed with leukemia in 2008. I started using a cell phone in 2003. I had a perfect blood test only a couple years before. There is something monstrous about the way the FCC fails to protect human health and the biological world in foisting this addictive and invasive technology on us without being truthful about the multiplicity of very real and potent harms to children, people, insects, plants, animals and society at large. Landlines, yes. Cell phones and 5G: no.
