Testimony: I, RuthAnn R., was living in Wisconsin in an apartment building in 2012, that had 31 Smart Meters on a panel directly under my apartment, in the parking garage. I did not realize that they were there, nor did I learn of their presence until after I became quite ill. I stopped sleeping at night, waking with a buzzing feeling in my feet and legs, heart palpitations, and feelings of anxiousness about what I was experiencing. This went on for several days. By chance, I was at my dental office one day and told my dentist about how I was feeling. It was as if a light went on in his eyes! He had a dental journal that he shared with me in which a story had been submitted by a woman who had been made ill from a smart meter that was placed on her house without her consent or knowledge. As I read it, I got curious and discovered that the bank of meters were in the garage under my apartment. Not only that, but the resident living above my apartment had a strong game console with WiFi powering it that he allowed to run for 24/7. I also discovered that the couple living in the apartment to the side of mine had a WiFi router running 24/7 and it was positioned so that it affected me as I sat in my kitchen. It was starting to make sense to me, but I didn't know exactly what to do about it. I borrowed a meter from someone I knew in order to measure the EMF and RF that were streaming into my living space, and found it to be at extremely high levels, certainly enough to wreck my sleep and how I was feeling. I had pain, dizziness, loud tinnitus, headaches, digestive upsets, brain fog, and my feet were getting numb and painful. I determined that I must vacate the apartment as soon as possible, or I would not be able to survive. I had to give two months' notice before I could leave it, which I did, and I suffered continually until I could get out of there. I went to live with my sister who lived in a rural area, and shortly I was feeling much better, getting better sleep, and able to function as I once had before the meters and WiFi affected me so dramatically. I now live in another state, where I am not constantly bombarded by WiFi and smart meters, although we do have one that works on the wiring of the house, and thus I have not been able to be as healthy or comfortable as I once was before this all started. I suffered two heart attacks over a year ago, which I believe was directly related to the stress of having become sensitive to radio frequencies.

Thank you.
