

Name: Evan – a child

To Whom It May Concern:

As you can imagine, it's extremely disheartening and frustrating to be dealing with this with my seven year old boy (and the rest of my family but especially for a child). I think Evan has hit his capacity of dealing with EMF's at the end of this school year. We don't have a meter wifi or anything like that at home and his seems to regain his health when he's home.

Last night we were at his grandparents house (they have a AMR meter on their home and also have wifi which they are disconnecting soon and going to a wired system... already made the call) my son after about an hour of being there.. just layed on the floor and didn't look well. He then moved to the living room and layed on the floor there. I asked if he was okay and he just grabbed my hand and said, "I have to get out of here.. I want to leave right now, I don't feel well." We live on the same road and I walked him home and managed to get him calmed down over there and obviously knew he had to get out of that environment and once home.. he felt a bit better.

Today at school, his teacher had been complaining about Evan not being able to pay attention in school and being very spacey some day and hyperactive other (this is not normally the way he is!) I talked to him tonight and asked him how he was feeling at school. He said "his brain feels crazy sometimes. Like he is a remote control vehicle). He also said he gets dizzy at school and doesn't feel right, that his brain hurts. He also has been having stomach distress almost every day at school. I'm working with the school right now and providing them info on negative effects of EMF.. we'll see what happens. I might have to homeschool him next year.
