

State: Pennsylvania

Name: Cindy A. Copp

Occupation: I have my degrees in Business Administration with an emphasis on marketing and sociology and then went back to school for a degree in Archeology and later went back again to be a Certified Nurse's Assistant in two states. I was blessed with a high IQ and I worked hard and put myself through school. I first started working as a Firefighter and Archeologist for the Grand Canyon Wild Land where I did historic preservations. I also worked as a Biological Science Technician for the Gettysburg National Military Park as a state licensed Pesticide and Herbicide applicator. My most recent job was working as a Certified Nurse's Assistant until I could no longer work. My pain and suffering make me an undependable worker.

Wireless Health Effects: I first remember feeling bothered by fluorescent lights when I was going through school. I would get tired and lightheaded only in the classroom and I did not know what was causing it. Now when I am around wireless technology I have constant ringing in my ears, headaches, nausea, insomnia, lack of concentration, memory loss, chest pain, rapid heartbeat, vibration through my body, my balance is off, vision problems, agitation, anxiety, I can't describe what goes on, confusion. My symptoms are so unbearable at times, I feel suicidal. I feel an energy surge through my body and I have been diagnosed with neurocognitive disorder. Most of my health effects get better when I am away from wireless technology.

Wireless technology has affected my life: Just a few years ago I was thriving. I had to leave my job and I can no longer work. I am not dependable, I couldn't sleep all night and in the morning I couldn't get out of bed to go to work. I have depleted my savings to get my case through court for disability benefits. I sold my home and purchased 10 acres of land, which I have no money to build on. I live out of my car now.

I cannot even go into a Best Buy or any electronic store parking lot. I cannot shop at any stores or malls. I rarely go into libraries, only to get what I need and quickly get out. I can't visit my sister because she lives near high-tension wires. Cell phones give me headaches. I cannot tolerate electronics on airplanes. I always used to attend a music festival in Pennsylvania and now I cannot tolerate it because of all the wireless. I can't go into movie theaters anymore because I get so sick. When I visit a doctor's office I have to wait in my car until I get called to go in. Everywhere I go I make sure to do what I need quickly and I never linger. Suicide is on my mind constantly. I have been called crazy for having these symptoms. I have friends and family but I can't be around them because they are so immersed in this technology.

Concerns for 5G: I feel like our technology is turning on us and we have taken it too far and there is way too much. I don't see a healthy population and every generation since the 50's is getting worse because of technology. Corporate greed is pushing a technology that is detrimental.
