Wireless technology affects my health in multiple ways. Depending on its intensity I develop symptoms in as little as 5 minutes after being exposed. The symptoms include dizziness, skin rash, tingling teeth, difficulty thinking and concentrating, heart palpitations and a feeling of being totally drained. I can feel fine going into a building that has wifi and feel extremely sick leaving just a few minutes later.

Wireless technology has put huge restrictions on my life. I avoid the grocery store, restaurants, concerts, the hairdresser, the mall and stores--I 'pick up' the wifi in any place that has it--and always confirm that indeed the location has wifi. I don't travel; I cannot be in an airport much less an airplane. I can't stay in hotels. I suffer from symptoms at the doctor's office or visits to the hospital. I can't take classes in buildings with wifi. I cannot visit schools. I have to think twice before going anywhere at all.

I am concerned not only for the restrictions wifi has put on my life, but also for the effects it is having on millions of others who are not wifi sensitive--pregnant women, babies, young children, kids in school, anyone with a cell phone. I am very concerned about the health effects that we have yet to discover.
